

Possessing legal medical cannabis

Marihuana or better known as cannabis is still a controlled substance but when prescribed by a medical practitioner, it is legal to possess in any province in Canada. When prescribed you may only carry 30 times the prescribed daily dose/grams at any given time. You also may purchase that same dosage from a licensed producer every 30 days. Never try to leave the country with your medical cannabis, for you will be placed under arrest by the country you wish to enter. In Canada the supreme court of Canada ruled that a citizen when prescribed medical cannabis by a medical practitioner, may possess in any form they choose. It could be in a form of dried buds or flowers, extracts or edibles. But in order to comply with the Marihuana for medical purpose regulations, prescribed medical cannabis patients must purchase from a licensed producer sanctioned by Health Canada. The bottle that contains the medical cannabis from the licensed producer is the true form of proof you are able to possess the medical cannabis. Licensed Producers will often off a card when you become a client of theirs, but most licensed producer's cards don't contain the necessary information in order to comply with the controlled substances act. Only cards from the licensed producers that contain the specific information detailed below will comply with the controlled substances act.

- Daily dose/grams
- Client/patient name
- Medical practitioner's name
- Type of medical practitioner
- Product package date
- Product shipment date
- Expected delivery date
- THC %
- CBD%

If the prescription bottle you are carrying is too old for you to be possessing that medical cannabis or exceeds the bottles described capacity then you are subject to charges under the controlled substances act. So always protect yourself and keep your medical cannabis in its prescribed bottle. Following the MMPR guidelines will keep you protected from law enforcement. **
